VEGETINE AN EXCELLENT MEDICINE. AN EXCEDERT MEDICINE.

for Rheumatism and General Prostration of the Nervous System, with good success. I recom-mend Vegotine as an excellent medicine for such complaints. Yours very truly, C. W. VANDEGRIFT. Mr. Vandegrift, of the firm of Vandegrift & Huffman, is a well known business man in this place, having one of the largest stores in Spring-field. O.

SAFE AND SURE. Mr. H. R. Stevens: In 1872 your Vegetine was recommended to me, and, yielding to the persussions of a friend. I consented to try it. At the time I was suffering from general debiling the suffering from general debiling the suffering from general debiling. ly and nervous prostration, superinduced by overwork and ir egular habits. Its wonderful strengthening and curative properties seemed to affect my debilitated system from the first dose; and under its persistent use I rapidly recovered, gaining more than usual health and good feeling. Since then I have not hesitated to give Vegetine my most unqualified endorsement, as being a safe, sure and powerful agent in promoting health and restoring the wasted system to new life and energy. Vegetine is the only medicine I use; and as long as I live I never expect to find a better. Yours truly,

The following letter from Rev. G. W. Mansfield, formerly pastor of the Methodist Episcopal Church, Hyde Park, and at present settled in Lowell, must convince every one who reads his letter of the wonderful curative qualities of Veg. etine as a thorough cleaser and purifier of the blood. Hyde Park, Mass., Feb. 15, 1876.

Mr. H. R. Stevens,

Dear Sir: About ten years ago my health failed through the depleting effects of dyspepsis;
nearly a year later I was attacked by typhoidfever in its worst form. It settled in my back, and took the form of a large deep-seated abscess. which was fifteen months in gathering. I had two surgical operations by the best skill in the state, but received no permanent cure. I suffered great pain at times, and was constantly weak ened by a profuse discharge. I also lost small pieces of bone at different times.

Matters ran on thus for about seven years, till May, 1874, when a friend recommended me to go to your office, and talk with you on the virtue of Vegetine. I did so, and by your kindness passed through your manufactory noting the passed through your manufactory, noting the ingredients, &c., by which your remedy is produced.

I commenced taking it soon after, but felt worse from its effects; still I perserved, and soon felt it was benefitting me in other respects. Yet I did not see the results I desired till I had taken the still be taken to be the seed to be the seed to be a seed to be the seed t ken it faithfully for little more than a year, when the difficulty in the back was cured; for nine months I have enjoyed the best of health. I have in that time gained twenty-five pounds of flesh, being heavier than ever before in my life, and I was never more able to perform labor During the past few weeks I had a scrofulous swelling asiargo as my fist gather on another part of my body.

1 took Vegetine faithfully, and it removed it level with the surface in a month. I thick I should have been cured of my main trouble sooner if I had taken larger dosss, after having become accustomed to its effects. Let your patrons troubled with scrofula or kid-ney disease understand that it takes time to cure chronic disenses; and, if they will patiently take Vezetine, it wil, in my judgment, cure them.

With great obligations I am Yours very truly. G. W. MANSFIELD,

A Bourbon Komance.

A curious proof of the persistence of royalty to the elder branch of the Bourbons, writes a Paris correspondent, has just come to light. Thirteen years ago an old legitimist, without family, wishing to make the Count de Chambord his heir, and not knowing how to transmit his little fortune to the count without dan ger of its being seized or otherwise taken possession of by the powers that were, hit on the curious expedient of confiding his wealth (some $2,200) to his old servant, as thorough a devotee of Henry V as himself, directing her to put the money into a basket, to carry it to the count as soon as he himself should be dead and

The old servant promised her master to do as he enjoined, and accordingly, on the morrow after the faneral of the latter, she set out on her journey, carrying the money with her in a little basket, and, having reached Probsdorff in safety, was admitted to the prince's presence and executed her commission. The prices, greatly touched by the incident, endeavored to get the old woman to seems the money for herself; but she utterly refused to do so or to accept any pecuciary remuneration for her trouble.
"Is there nothing I can do for you?" exclaimed the count, disappointed at her repeated refusals. "Yes, your majesty," returned the old woman, "let me kiss you!" The proffered kiss baving been received and repaid by the count, to the old servant's interest delight and glorification, the latter returned to Paris, where she has since resided, and where she died a short time ago. After her death her relatives discovered, to their utter smazement and equal satisfaction, a sum of over £3 000 in bank notes, too notes being rolled up in a dexan living parcels and placed in a little basket under her bod. This astorlab-ing windfall was forthwith taken normalism of by the sister of the decessed, a poor old soul of eighty-five years of age, with next to nothing to live upon, and to whom the sum thus found ap-peared a sort of California and Golconda rolled into one, when, to the dismay of the heiress and the other relatives, they came upon a paper which proved to be the will of the deceased, hequesthing the whole to the Count de Chambord.

It was soon ascertained, through the words, thous of the postmen, to at the deceased had received agree thristness from the Count de Christman Chambord a bandsome present of money in the form of a eneck. The postman had thus been the medium through whom the count's gifts had reached the old servant; she had regularly c-shed the checks thus sent her, but had never touched a penny of the money, the whole of which was found in the basket. The sister, Milla Concord, has sent a letter to the Count de Chambord, informing him of the affair. There is little doubt but the count will authorize the poor old woman to take possession of tan whole.

saved by the Prajers of his People. The editor of the Coumbia (S. C.) Register, in the course of a most interesting account of a visit to Gavernor Hampton, whom he found greatly improved in strength and steadily recovering from the severe trials through which he has recently passed, tells a striking story of a dream which the Governor had at the crisis of his case, and tells it in the Governor's own werds. The visitor, about to take his leave, said to the Governor.

"At least in all your serious illness you had the devoted love of your own people.

"Ah, yes, sir," was the hearty, deep toned reply, "never man more. I believe, as confidently as I do that I live, that the prayers of the people saved my life. I will tell you why I feel and believe it so firmly. Whilst I was lying here at the point of death and had become utterly indifferent whether I lived or died, I got a letter from an old Mothodist preacher, one of my old friends. He wrote me word in forming me of the deep and devout petitions. put up in behalf of my restoration by the Moth. odist Conference then in session at Newberry. He then urged upon me to exercise my will to live in response to the supplications of the people of the whole State, who were praying for me night and day in every household in the State. My sisters, who had tremblingly brought the letter to my bedside and read it to me, then arged me to listen to the kind, loving words of the man of God and to rouse my will to live, and I promised her to do so. I fell into a deep sleep that night, and the most vivid dream I ever experienced in my life crossed my elumbers. I dreamt I was in a spacious room, and that in it I was moved to all parts of the State, so that I met my assembled friends everywhere. I remember toost distinctly of all old Beaufort, where I had last been. It seem. ed there were immense assemblages, and as I looked down upon them a grave personage approached me and touched me on the shoulder and said to me: "These people are all praying for you. Live, live, live ! I never realized any thing like it before. It seemed a vision. I woke the next morning faching the life blood creeping through my vaiss, and I told my family the crisis was passed and I would get better." At the close of the touching and thrilling relation, we hade him good by, heartily wishing him a speedy recovery, and many, many long years of health and usefulness.
